Power outage for Nickel Hill Protesters claim victory, though door still open

By Neil Fater

After investing three years and millions of dollars, Nickel Hill Energy has decided it will not build a natural-gas-fired power plant near the Andover-Dracut line, says Gina Molz, project manager.

"We've been developing this for three years. The New England energy market conditions are different now than they were three years ago. It really is a business decision," says Molz. "There's a lot of new plants coming on line."

The decision to pull the plug on Nickel Hill was greeted excitedly by opponents of the plant — including members of the Merrimack Valley Residents for the Environment. After she learned that Constellation Power, the parent company of Nickel Hill, planned to abandon the project, MVRE president Sheryl Poole went home and opened a bottle of champagne with her husband.

"This plant would have been the largest carbon-dioxide emitter in the Merrimack Valley. You add that up with the other polluters in the area, and it never made sense," says Laura Jordan, MVRE board member. "We feel empowered by this."

But Jordan also notes "the battle's not over." Nickel Hill has not formally terminated its pursuit of state permits to build a plant. If another company was interested in developing a power plant at the same site, Constellation could sell the Nickel Hill development rights to it. Apparently, some businesspeople have expressed interest in pursuing the matter.

"They have had some overtures," says David Rosenzweig, the Andover attorney representing the power company. "There is some prospect that there may be someone who assumes (Constellation's) position in the project."

A youth center model?

North Andover director offers advice

By Rebecca Piro

Ah, the sweetness of success. For Rick Gorman, that sweet feeling can be found at the North Andover Youth Center, where the gymnasium is charged with the energy of running feet, and the hallways echo with the laughter of children.

Gorman, North Andover's youth services director, walks proudly through the 17,000 square-foot campus, greeting kids by name. For him, the dream that took seven years and $2.4 million to build became a reality one year ago this July.

So how did North Andover do it? "I had a strong marketing team, and it was very good at raising money," says Gorman. North Andover secured town land on which to build a youth center and built it almost completely with private funds.

Such a plan can bring a youth center to Andover and the pri-

ABC spelling out a need

By Rebecca Piro

Almost 28 years ago, Carnell Cooper stepped out of the ABC House on Main Street as a student for the last time.

Yesterday, Wednesday, he returned to Andover as a trauma doctor at the University of Maryland Medical Center — proof of the difference ABC and a good education can make, he says — and asked supporters to give the same opportunities he received to the minority students of tomorrow.

A Better Chance is a nationwide program that brings minority high-school students to prosper-

Web question*Should community service still be a graduation requirement at AHS?

Last week's Townsmen Website question was: How do you feel about the firing of Andover band director Brandon Psenicka?

Out of 125 respondents, 109, or 87 percent, said, "I am strongly opposed. He's the best thing to happen to the music program in years and he should be rehired." Four people said "I am disappointed, but I accept that the administration has the right to dismiss pre-professional staff as it sees fit." One person voted, "I support the decision. Among other things, he is not certified to teach," and five people said, "I strongly support the decision. They should have dismissed him last year." Six people responded with "I have no opinion."

This week's question: Do you think the Andover High School community service program should continue as a graduation requirement?

• Yes, I think all students should learn the value of contributing positively to their community.

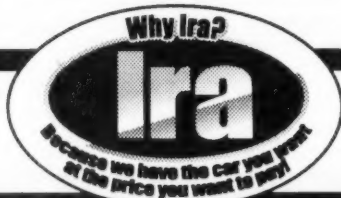

• Yes, it looks good on a college transcript.

• No, it looks better on a college transcript if it's voluntary.

• No, having it be mandatory detracts from the spirit of the program and the enthusiasm of the students participating.

IN BRIEF

Bottom of the ninth for new voting precinct

Residents can't change the addition of a ninth precinct in Andover, but they can mull it over.

A majority of selectmen decided Monday night to postpone approval of the new, ninth precinct that Town Clerk Randy Hanson says is necessary due to population growth.

Selectman John Hess voiced hesitance about voting on the ninth precinct — drawn from the center of town — before residents have a chance to absorb the change. Assistant Town Clerk Meredith Barlow explained that it is nearly impossible to make changes to the precinct map at this point, but Selectmen Mary French and Ted Teichert agreed that it was better to allow residents time for feedback before voting.

The state allows only 4,000 people per precinct, registered and non-registered voters combined. Federal census numbers will likely show that Andover's population is around 32,000 — which leaves too little room for error in only eight precincts, Hanson predicted earlier.

Kristin Wise of Inwood Lane pointed out that some residents may be concerned about the affects of representation when the state redistricts this summer. Precinct 5, currently represented by David Nangle, is the only precinct in Andover not represented by Barry Finegold. With the changes in the precinct map, it's possible that more residents will see a change in their representative, she said.

Selectmen agreed to revisit the matter at their next meeting, scheduled for June 4. The precinct map is available for review in the town clerk's office.

Fire Department's Memorial Day service

The annual firefighters' Memorial Day Service will be held at West Station on the corner of Greenwood and Chandler Roads, due to construction at Central Station on Main Street. Starting at 8:15 a.m., firefighters will honor deceased members of the department with a public roll call and ceremony on Monday, May 28.

Selectmen deny spiritual request

The work of a governmental board is politics, not religion.

That's what the selectmen agreed Monday night, when they refused to sign a proclamation supporting spiritual practices in China.

Jennifer Zhang of Windemere Road told the board that the Chinese government is killing thousands of Chinese, who practice an ancient tradition called Falun Dafa. The persecution of the people and the practice — which emphasizes truth and kindness — has been ongoing for two years, she explained. Chinese officials consider practitioners of Falun Dafa a threat to the Communist government, she added.

The selectmen's signature on the proclamation would be one more example of support, Zhang said. North Andover, as well as other communities in the Merrimack Valley, have recently issued similar proclamations, she added.

"It shows that my local government is acknowledging what residents are doing (to support the persecuted)," she said.

But the town officials were hesitant. "We've never as a board endorsed a spiritual practice," said Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski.

Selectman Ray Hender agreed. "I'm appalled by repression of any sort by a government, but it's my opinion that this is quasi-religious," he said.

The selectmen agreed not to take any action on Zhang's petition.

Library's children room expanding, expect some change

Memorial Hall Library will be expanding the amount of space it has available for children's and young adult services. In order to carry out the plan to create this space, the library will be undergoing space renovations for the next four months that will require certain areas of the library to become unavailable for use while renovations take place.

The library's "quiet study" on the top floor will be closed during the last week of May and for the months of June and July. A quiet study will be available in the November Room on the main floor of the library during that time. Once the renovations to the top floor are completed, the Children's Room will be moved to the top-floor meeting room, where children's services will be provided throughout the rest of the summer while renovations take place on the lower level. The library's music collection will be moved to new shelving on the top floor, and the November Club Room will also be moved to the top floor once the work on that area is completed.

Library Director James E. Sutton said he and his staff regret the inconveniences and ask for "our library patrons' understanding during this transitional period."

Bazaar Days coming

The Andover Center Association will be holding its annual Bazaar Days on Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16.

The hours will be on Friday, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

O'Brien considering US run

Andover resident John O'Brien Jr. is mulling the prospect of running for state treasurer or congressman in 2002, according to reports from the Eagle Tribune.

The former state senator, who was a utility deregulator for the state, left politics in 1998 when he took a job with Sithe Electric as a utility executive. He is thinking about picking up where Congressman Marty Meehan might leave off, however, if Meehan decides to join the 2002 gubernatorial race. O'Brien has also expressed interest in State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien's seat. She is also reportedly considering entering the governor's race.

Former Sen.

O'Brien left a position on the town's Government Review Committee last year.

State Rep. Barry Finegold, who has also voiced interest in the 5th District Congressional race, says he is unconcerned about the possibility of another candidate. State Sen. James Jajuga of D-Methuen is also reportedly considering candidacy, as well as Lowell Mayor Eileen Donoghue and state Environmental Secretary Robert Durand, among others.

"There are a lot of people that are looking at it right now, and I look at it like a marathon," says Finegold. "There are a lot of people at the starting line, and not all will finish. I can't really concern myself with what other people are doing."

Assistant super now a doctor

By Adam Groff

That's Doctor McGrath to you.

Assistant Superintendent Marinel McGrath successfully defended her doctoral dissertation on Monday at Boston University after slaving for three years in the Educational Policy program while meeting her full-time obligations in Andover schools. She estimates that she has been averaging from three to five hours of sleep per night for the last year or so, periodically pulling one or two all-nighters in a row.

McGrath's 170-page dissertation, "A View From the World of Practice," looks at the changing role of the public school principal under Massachusetts Education Reform. She interviewed 30 principals from the elementary-, middle-, and high-school levels, male and female, from urban and suburban districts, and she also interviewed some of the architects and legislators of Ed Reform.

"The major change was in the governance structure," said McGrath, still in dissertation-defense mode on Tuesday night. "The role of the principal changed with respect to leadership and management, and there has been a corresponding change in their professional-development needs."

Among other things, McGrath says that Massachusetts principals now find themselves with responsibilities for instructional leadership, and for discipline issues that were previously left to school committees or superintendents. McGrath says her committee at BU suggested that she turn her work into a series of articles and submit them to the Massachusetts Education Reform Review Committee.

McGrath was hired as assistant superintendent in 1996. She lives in Newburyport with her husband, Gary Oakes, an education professor at Simmons College. McGrath says for the last year her husband has also shouldered the obligations of shopping, cooking, and editing her manuscripts.

What will she do now?

"I can't wait to pick up my cross-stitch needle!" she said.

ous communities for educational opportunities. Andover's program has welcomed young men and women into the community for 30 years, says Ellen Fleming, a board member for ABC. The Andover program currently operates on a $65,000 annual budget – almost 100 percent of which is raised through private donations – and houses, feeds and nurtures eight students from a range of backgrounds.

ABC is now looking for $480,000 to renovate the same building that Cooper lived in during his three years in Andover, after leaving his home in Dillon, S.C. back in 1969.

Board members have raised $300,000 of the $480,000 figure since January, working quietly to gain support. They announced Wednesday at their annual meeting that they are ready to raise the final $180,000, which is slightly more than one-third of the goal.

"There's always something that needs to be done in an old house," says Fleming.

The board intends to build better study areas and provide computer upgrades for the students, who are required to maintain a certain grade-point average as part of the program. Also in need of improvement is the living area for the girls' resident directors – currently Patty and Barry McCloskey, who reside with the students during the academic year as the students' parents away-from-home.

The goal of the renovation is to provide a "functional setting," in which the students can thrive and the board can attract and keep qualified resident directors, says Fleming.

Cooper's address at Wednesday's annual ABC meeting was expected to be a good way to show people just how positively the program can affect the lives of young people, says resident Jane St. Amand. She and her husband hosted Cooper in their Ballardvale home on weekends during his ABC experience.

"He's done very well, and he gives back to his community," says Amand, who still keeps in touch with Cooper.

In addition to his medical practice, Cooper now volunteers with a program called the Violence and Intervention Project in Baltimore, working with repeat victims of violence.

"Not only does he have a successful job, but now he's turning around and donating his time to the community," agrees Fleming.

With Cooper's message, Fleming is confident that ABC will raise the funds needed to help the program continue to prosper. All 21 board members have given, as well as Andover entities such as Andover Bank, South Church and the Rotary Club.

"You can't help but want to donate," she says. "You just want to be a part of something so positive."

ABC hopes to raise all $480,000 by this December.

North Andover: role model?

■ YOUTH CENTER

vate Andover Youth Foundation as well, Gorman predicts. AYF intends to raise $4 million privately by January 2002, and construct a 30,000 square-foot youth center on town land off Ledge Road in west Andover by that fall. AYF would then hand the building and operating costs to the town.

The only potential flaw with Andover's plan, says Gorman – as an outside observer – is the clarity of the goal. Does AYF intend to build a youth center or a community center?

"What are you raising money for? What are you building? That's your biggest problem," he says. "People all have to get on the same page, or you're never going to get it built."

Gorman is alluding to town-wide chatter about a community center – a place for both youth and seniors – which has continued since the push for a new senior center at Will Hall failed at Town Meeting last month. AYF members say they are trying to raise money for a youth center, but add that they're willing to mold their plans into a community center if and when senior representatives choose to approach them.

That ambiguity could be enough to turn away potential donors, worries Gorman. "When you're (asking people) to give money, you have to be clearer than that," he says.

AYF President Larry Larsen scoffs at the suggestion. "I think that's not true," he says. "We have a very clear definition of what we're going to do."

Any construction for a community center or campus in west Andover would only happen after the youth center is built, says Larsen. AYF's openness in terms of the community-center concept does not and will not deter the foundation from its present goal of a youth center.

"We said (to architect Joel Bargmann), 'Design a building in such a way that the concept could be enlarged to create all the other things that a community could wish to have,'" recalls Larsen. "The last thing we want to do is confuse the focus."

But Youth Services Director

Bill Fahey, a former youth services employee in North Andover, admits that the buzz about a community center could be confusing to residents. He hopes that AYF can steer donors away from that confusion with a strong emphasis on a youth center, first and foremost.

"Let us be the first group out there," he says. "Once we're out there, it will address all the youths' needs. Then, if the town feels they want a community center, (will they be) willing to fund that? I can't answer that question."

It will take time for donors and residents to fully grasp the youth-center concept, says AYF fundraiser Tom Jones. As a supporter of the community-campus concept, he agrees that there is potential for confusion, but adds that AYF has time to clarify its goal. In addition, Article 11 – which Special Town Meeting overwhelmingly approved – authorized the town to give AYF land to build a youth center, specifically.

vate deal, and fundraising strategies. He's followed Andover's struggle for a youth center as an observer, and he's confident in the need for a center, as well as AYF's will to succeed.

What's important, he says, is to get that first big donation. For North Andover, it meant convincing a donor to give $250,000, after which several other donors jumped on board.

Whatever course Andover chooses with its center, Gorman will be sitting in his office at North Andover's busy youth center, ready and willing to offer advice. "I always keep my door open," he says. But Larsen, who says North Andover's center is too small for what Andover wants, is confident AYF will get along just fine by itself. "We'll build it much faster than North Andover did," he adds.

It's time to set ground rules for public-private partnerships

Given the economic times, and the growing number of public-private partnerships proposed in Andover during the last few years, it's time for the town to develop a general policy for how all such partnerships will be handled.

It used to be that the town would build Andover's new buildings, and residents would throw a few bucks into a mayonnaise jar to help pay for incidentals such as Independence Day fireworks. Today, fireworks are in the town budget, but private groups are left to raise funds to build senior and youth centers.

Such efforts are becoming more common, and, certainly, public-private partnerships can benefit the town. In the past, youth sports organizations have proven to be more capable than the town of maintaining and improving town fields. Such partnerships help ease the burden on the taxpayer.

But creating a policy — a general framework in which all public-private partnerships will operate — will help those interested in future projects know what is expected of them. A clearly outlined policy will allow townspeople to more clearly understand the process, and perhaps encourage other groups to get involved. Ideas from private groups will all be treated equally. The interests of the town as a whole will be protected.

Although each potential project is unique and needs to be treated differently, there are some ground rules that every project should follow. It's time for the town to decide what those are.

Band chaperone has never noticed lack of student control

Editor, Townsmen:

To Superintendent Claudia Bach:

Since the decision to fire (no euphemisms please) Brandon Psenicka has already been made and will not be reversed, this letter only serves to put my thoughts into words. I understand that the reason given for the unsatisfactory review is poor classroom management. In my opinion, classroom management is not the primary measure of the effectiveness of a teacher of the performing arts. The most important qualities are the ability to inspire a love of the art and to challenge the students to produce the best possible performances.

My involvement and observation of Mr. Psenicka has been primarily as a working parent supporter of the marching band. This season started with the challenge to the band to be the championship band that they were capable of being. That the band succeeded in reaching this goal was pointed out many times at the School Committee meeting and in published letters. Nothing has been said of the path to reaching that goal. I'm not sure that you appreciate the effort that the marching band members make each year. They start practice before the school year with a several-day-long camp. Practices take up at least eight hours of each day at this camp. During the fall there are three-hour practices during two nights each week and a Saturday morning practice. The band performs at the Friday night football game and spends either Saturday or Sunday at a competition each week. It takes particular skill to keep the band focused and moving forward throughout this long season. The competitions go on regardless of weather.

The final competition this year was held at the end of October in a cold, pouring rain. Our band beat a band that they had been chasing for at least four years. In looking at the video tapes of the performance it is obvious that our band was out there to give the absolute best performance possible regardless of the weather and physical discomfort. A good band director inspires that kind of determination and can help the individuals bring forth that best possible performance. Mr. Psenicka provided that inspiration.

I have also been able to attend performances by the middle-school and high-school concert and jazz bands. The difficulty of the music performed and the level of performance have dramatically improved under Mr. Psenicka's tenure.

I don't believe that the criteria used for Mr. Psenicka's evaluation were the best measure of his performance. Would the athletic department get rid of a winning coach because his gym classes were rowdy? I highly doubt it. I have never had the opportunity to observe one of Mr. Psenicka's classes. I have seen him at band and winter guard practices and I didn't notice any lack of control of the students in these situations. This month, I was one of the chaperones on a marching band trip to Annapolis. There was no question of lack of control of the students at any time during the trip. At the end of the trip, the organizers told us that our band had been the best behaved group that had ever participated in their event. I find it difficult to believe that the behavior of his students in the classroom is that much worse than their behavior in the events to which I have been a witness.

I look forward to your response. I believe that enough concern about this matter has been and will be demonstrated that a formal response by you is necessary.

Andover High protest focuses attention on problems with 'elitist' MCAS test

Editor, Townsmen:

The recent protest by 10 Andover High School students against the MCAS ("10 refuse to take the MCAS," Townsmen, May 17) focuses much needed attention upon the issue of the state exam that is used to determine whether a public-school student in Massachusetts will graduate from high school. There is a growing tide of opposition among parents, educators and students against this exam as the sole measure for graduation.

The primary reason that many people, including myself, are opposed to the MCAS is that standardized tests are not accurate measures. They underestimate talented students who simply aren't good test-takers and they overestimate students who memorize but don't really understand.

There is also an issue of the quality of the test. A recent New York Times expose ("Right Answer, Wrong Score: Test Flaws Take Toll," New York Times, May 20) examined the track record of the four major companies in the testing industry, including Harcourt Educational Measurement, which is the company that makes the MCAS. Harcourt had quality problems with their tests in California, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Finally, the fact that private-school students in this state do not have to take the MCAS as a requirement for graduation makes the implementation of this test unfair and elitist.

Problem? Psenicka not the first to go

Editor, Townsmen:

Saturday I heard Robert Lague conduct the Northeastern Junior District Boys Chorus in Westford. Noticing in the program booklet the extensive education and experience that qualified him for this honor, I couldn't help wishing he were still a part of Andover's music program.

Now that the fine arts program has come under increased scrutiny because of Brandon Psenicka, this is a good time for us parents to ask ourselves if fine arts in the Andover Schools is giving our children what we want.

In the past two years, Andover has lost Robert Lague, Mark Napierkowski, Stephen Heimlich, and Brandon Psenicka. In my opinion, this upheaval has not been in the best interest of the fine arts in our schools. I urge any parent who is unhappy with the direction of fine arts in Andover to communicate your views to Superintendent Claudia Bach.

Outcome of his work was learning

Editor, Townsmen:

Not knowing the specifics regarding Mr. Psenicka's review, it is difficult to make a specific comment in rebuttal to the decision not to renew his contract. However, I'd like to suggest that although what is observed in a band classroom will differ from that seen in a traditional academic classroom, the results, in terms of learning, may be comparable.

In a science lab, all are working on the same experiment. In band, sections (brass, woodwind, percussion) are taken individually to work on parts of the music, while the rest of the band must wait. (Some of the waiting groups may actually be following their score silently, and others may be talking; however, the leader can only address one group at a time.) Musicians are a different breed of the human race: they have an artistic temperament, for sure. They may fool around, but when "their turn" comes, the students are attentive.

I have heard an "outcomes-based" educational system discussed and it seems that if we base Mr. Psenicka's ability on that, he would rate highly, as the marching band and color guard have performed outstandingly and have received trophies and awards for their performances. As far as the middle school is concerned, if the band has almost doubled, as was mentioned at the School Committee meeting aired on cable, that, too, is a terrific outcome and indicator of leadership ability. (Anyone who has middle-school-age children understands how hard it is to capture their attention and keep them on track.)

I realize that the decision is already made, but perhaps care can be taken in the future to avoid this type of problem so that the students, the program and the teacher will not suffer.

Student: Can talk to Psenicka as if he's an older sibling

Editor, Townsmen:

I have been in the AHS Concert Band for four years as of this year. I am a senior about to graduate and move on with my life, but can't get over the fact that when I leave for college, there are hundreds of kids in Andover who are still in school that love Mr. Psenicka.

Yes, that was the first time in the two years that I have known Brandon that I have referred to him as Mr. Psenicka, and it feels odd. You don't call your friend Mr./Ms. X, because you don't talk to friends like that, and that is what Brandon is to me and the rest of the kids who know him.

I looked at my first two years of concert band (with a different teacher) as a joke, and I originally took the class because I heard the class was one where it was game to make the teacher throw you out of class and that was funny. Going into my third year, I was tired of concert band. My friends dropped the class, and I wasn't too psyched for another year of the same routine. Then I heard that there was a new teacher doing the marching band, and that he wasn't like most teachers. I never heard one bad thing about this guy. Could such a teacher exist? I decided to stay in concert band my junior year.

Brandon became the first teacher I went out and got a Christmas present for.

Brandon is quoted as having a "laid back" class atmosphere. Is this a bad thing? How can being comfortable with the teacher hurt learning and not help? If I don't understand something I ask "Brandon" – not "Mr. Psenicka" – and Brandon helps. If I have just a bad day, I tell Brandon what's up, like I would talk to my older sibling. I don't do this with other teachers because I don't feel secure telling them how I feel that day or what I did over the weekend. Having a "laid back" atmosphere makes us want to learn, not feel under the impression that we have to learn. If more classes were organized like concert band, I would be more comfortable to speak out in class, and pay attention more. Not having Brandon as a concert band teacher doesn't directly hit me as I go to college in the fall, but I do care for this guy as he was the best teacher ever to cross my path. I understand the feelings against him concerning the teacher test, but I look at it as a test made by old teachers for older teachers where being real has no place. I know he will pass this summer when he takes the test, and I'm sure almost every kid feels the same way I do. If someone else replaces Brandon, the AHS bands will go right back to where they were three years ago... right back to when kids couldn't care less.

Soon, he'll represent the married men

State Rep. Barry Finegold is engaged to be married next year to Amy Gottesman of Boston. And his proposal, on May 11, was no small production. Enlisting the support of friends, family, and coworkers, Finegold, 30, beguiled his intended into believing that their vacation to the west coast earlier this month, which started with a wedding in Las Vegas and was to continue in California, was cut short by a supposedly unexpected House of Representatives budget vote. However, following the vote, and using the remainder of their vacation time, Finegold picked up a shocked Gottesman at work in a 1945 Rolls Royce, drove her to Logan Airport, and flew her to Paris for five days, where he proposed to her, in French, in the Tuileries Gardens in front of the Louvre.

"What was difficult is that I needed to get her passport," said Finegold of his plan, "so I said, 'You never know, we may want to go to Tijuana, Mexico after Las Vegas,' so that's how I got her to bring it, and I got possession of it."

This was so that he could have it packed when he picked her up after she returned to her job as a manager at Country Road clothing store on Newbury Street in Boston. He consulted with her best friend about what clothes to pack for her, and he coordinated the plan with her coworkers as well. Prior to all of this, Finegold had asked for Gottesman's father's permission to marry her.

"This was kind of like Mission Impossible," said Finegold. "One little small glitch, and the whole thing would have fallen apart."

So what about Finegold's intention to run for U.S. representative if Marty Meehan runs for governor?

Looking to dry up West Nile virus, officials begin attack on mosquitos

By Rebecca Piro

The days of the town's mosquito population are numbered.

Town officials launched an attack Monday against those species that pose the greatest threat to humans, especially the one that carries West Nile virus. The measures meant to knock mosquitoes dead are low-risk to humans and the environment, says Health Director Everett Penney.

Selectmen approved the plan of attack Monday night, following its recent approval by the Conservation Commission, Board of Health and the Andover Mosquito Control Advisory Committee. Last November's Special Town Meeting agreed to commit Andover to a three-year contract with the Northeast Mosquito Control District. Starting this spring, Andover is one of several communities that will take prevention measures against mosquitoes this year. Northeast Mosquito workers began taking action this week.

The plan of attack calls for treatment of catch basins and retention ponds with chemical pellets, especially in the areas of Route 125, Route 28 South and Salem Street, where five of the nine dead crows that were found last year tested positive for West Nile Virus. The chemicals will kill larvae in still-water areas, where mosquitoes breed, says Douglas Dunbar, Board of Health chairman. Because the health threat from mosquito-borne viruses is still low in town, workers will not treat wetland areas, nor will they spray for mosquitoes in neighborhoods at the present time.

"We don't have the data to support the need to kill that many mosquitoes at this time," says Penney.

If that status changes, workers may contemplate ground-spraying throughout high-risk neighborhoods. Aerial spraying, or spraying from above with airplanes carrying chemicals, will not be used at all, says Dunbar.

Aside from the chemical measures, the health department plans to educate residents about ways to protect themselves from mosquitoes' peskiness and pestilence. Members will conduct informa-

Krishna Bhatta blesses the offerings at the groundbreaking ceremony for the Chinmaya Mission's new building.

Mission launched

By Rebecca Piro

Members of the Chinmaya Mission group gathered in the morning light of Thursday, May 17, to ask the blessing of Mother Earth for their building project.

They plan to break ground at 1 Union St. on a 23,000 square-foot building – a new headquarters for the Chinmaya Indian Mission Boston.

With Interstate 495 rushing close by, the $4 million center will be a place of peace, study and worship, says Gopala

Dwarakanath, a board member for the group.

About 175 families, 25 of them from Andover, currently travel to a worship center in Bedford for ceremonies. The building, approved in February by the Planning Board, will become one of about 12 national centers for the Chinmaya Mission group – a philosophic branch of Hinduism started by Swami Chinmayananda, who died in 1993.

"Anytime we begin anything, it's auspicious for us to get blessings and permission from the deities," says member Mala Umapathy. "We ask permission from all the five elements: fire, water and so on."

Swami Shantananda, of the Chinmaya Mission Tristate center in New Jersey, and Krishna Bhatta from New England Hindu temple in Ashland, joined Thursday's "Bhoomi Pooja," a ceremony in which members worship the earth. Members blessed bricks that will be cornerstones of the building's foundation, as well as a conch shell from India that will go underneath the site for the altar, says Dwarakanath.

The philosophic mission of Vedanta teaches members to give back to society, and teach

Another study for Ballardvale

With expansion sought, Genetics funds look at traffic

By Rebecca Piro

How many more vehicles will the Genetics' expansion plan add to Ballardvale's streets? Planning Board Chairman Paul Salafia has requested that the town hire a traffic consultant to find out.

Genetics Institute presented traffic data to the Planning Board Tuesday night, during the first hearing session for a special permit to build.

Genetics has proposed adding almost 50,000 square feet to two existing buildings on Lowell Junction Road. Genetics owns both buildings, which are down the street from the company's main facility and are used for storage.

Company representatives say they first will transfer employees to the new buildings after construction is complete, which would not create additional commuters. Months later, they could hire up to 90 new employees, which would mean up to 90 more cars driving through Ballardvale every day. Genetics could, however, fill the two new buildings to capacity – meaning hundreds more employees – within the next five years, concluded Marc Gagnon, manager of facilities, planning and design.

Salafia's call for an independent traffic study is a common procedure called a peer review. Genetics will foot the bill for the additional consultant, who will conduct a study and compare traffic numbers with Genetics' figures.

"It will help to insure the integrity of the process, since traffic is a main concern," said Salafia. "(Traffic) is really what we're talking about here."

For years, Ballardvale residents have complained about excessive commuter traffic clogging up the historic district's streets. Many drivers traveling to and from work at Genetics cut through the 'Vale in an effort to save time.

Ballardvale residents sued Genetics when the company expanded two years ago, and Genetics settled the matter by paying $100,000 to residents for a traffic mitigation plan. Some residents have threatened to fight Genetics again if the company presses forward with its plans.

The town will complete its own traffic study within the next month. The Genetics hearing will reconvene Tuesday, June 26.

Residents Gopala and Shashi Dwarakanath help set a cornerstone for a new Hindu mission.

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

100 Years Ago in Andover

Elm Street, from the square to Summer Street, is in a practically impassable condition owing to mud which is inches deep. This is one of the worst pieces of street in town and at the same time is one of the most traveled.

50 Years Ago in Andover

Mrs. Emma G. Carter, former English teacher and dean of girls at Pynchard High School, has been awarded a grant by the board of foreign scholarships, to teach English at Pierce College, in Ellenika, Greece. She will also be assistant to the school's president.

25 Years Ago in Andover

The Patriotic Holiday Committee, with the assistance of the local veterans' organizations, will replace the American flags on the graves of all veterans, who are interred in Andover cemeteries prior to Memorial Day.

Rev. Michael D. Burbine became the first Andover native and parishioner to be administered the sacrament of Holy Orders in St. Augustine's Church last Saturday afternoon. Father Burbine, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F.

Burbine, 52 York St., Andover, was ordained by Most. Rev. Joseph F. Ruocco, Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, before a church filled with relatives, friends, and priests welcoming him into the Augustinian Order.

Fred W. Doyle, a member of the Pynchard Free School Trustees for many years, has provided and bequested to the group a sum of $10,000 to establish a scholarship fund. The Fred Doyal Scholarship will be awarded on the basis of "merit, scholarship, and performance... and the student's financial need." The Fred Doyal Scholarship will provide a graduating Andover High School student with $750 this year, the first award to be made from the new fund.

10 Years Ago in Andover

Nurse Alice M. O'Reilly of Andover has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Mary Immaculate group of corporations.

Andover High School candidates for student government were dropped from the ballot by school administrators for spicing up their campaign speeches with raw language which included sexual references. Many students and parents are contesting the administration's decision on the basis that the candidates' free-speech rights were violated. A debate is scheduled for May 23 to grant forum and to discuss the issue.

Andover residents voted Monday night against increasing property taxes. As a result, Phase II cuts approved by the School Committee earlier this year, will go into effect. The result will include major cuts in the home economics and industrial programs, and at least 13 assistant athletic coaches at Andover High School. Also effected will be the middle school's art and music departments, the media departments in each elementary school. The cuts might also close the Shawsheen School, stopping its use as a kindergarten and early childhood center.

The committee will meet next week to discuss any options to reconfigure the Shawsheen School as a K through grade two program with money generated from before and after-school care.

Another company has expressed mild interest in rights

NICKEL HILL

There may be more that's known in the coming days and weeks."

"We've had some casual inquiries over the past couple days and we're evaluating our options," said Molz, "but we've obviously made the announcement and made our decision."

Dennis Piendak, Dracut town manager, is still pitching the site as a prime location for a power plant. The site is industrially zoned and located near a 30-inch natural gas pipeline from Canada and near high-tension wires that can carry energy across the Merrimack River.

"Constellation has made a decision not to go forward. They may hold the door open for a limited time (for another company). But from what I can tell, they're not holding the door open for long," says Rosenzweig.

He expects to file a letter with state permitting agencies saying Nickel Hill does not plan to continue its effort within the next few weeks, if another company does not want to buy the development rights.

The MVRE's lawyers are preparing briefs because an appeal was pending regarding noise- and air-pollution permits sought by Nickel Hill, says Jordan. She believes MVRE may pursue this fight to produce state standards on how power plants are sited and what kind of citizen input is required.

"We have a chance to make law with this thing, and maybe it's worth carrying forward," she says.

Good times, bad times

Whether one agrees with Jordan that Constellation's decision not to build is good news, may depend on what side of the Merrimack River one resides.

"As a taxpayer in Dracut, it's too bad that the revenue source is gone. They had expected $76 million over 20 years," says Everett Penney, Andover health director.

But Penney says there have been public health gains for the Merrimack Valley, as a result of the legal battle. He says the state seems more sensitive to the cumulative impact of having several polluters in one area. The proposed power plant would have been built within two miles of Andover's new Cross Street schools, and added to the pollution already produced by existing incinerators in the valley.

Reasons for effort's end

While Penney and MVRE

members consider Constellation's decision to be a result of the Andover and MVRE legal effort, funded partly by Andover tax money, Nickel Hill representatives say the decision to switch off the power plant proposal was entirely market-based (see sidebar, next page).

Sheryl Poole asks for funds at Town Meeting this year.

What next for MVRE?

By Adam Groff

Sheryl Poole, Merrimack Valley Residents for the Environment president, says that although this environmental battle appears won, MVRE's war is far from over, and her organization will be anything but idle.

"MVRE has a lot of irons in the fire," said Poole. "First of all, it needs to make sure this proposal is dead in the water. Next, we need to look at that land. This is the second power plant proposal for that site. We need to look at what to do so we don't face proposal No. 3."

Prior to Constellation, American National Power considered the Dracut site for a power plant but dropped the idea before it got to the permitting stage, according to Dracut Town Manager Dennis Piendak. Poole said MVRE intends to support any Dracut residents who want the 25-acre site owned by Brox Industries to be used for something other than a home for a source of pollution.

"Nobody is averse to the development of that land, we'd just like it to be developed in ways that don't compromise the health of the people of the Merrimack Valley," said Poole.

The MVRE has broader regional goals, however. In fact, Poole did not hear the news about the Nickel Hill cancellation until after the meeting she had Monday night with Assistant Secretary of Environmental Affairs Gina McCarthy and Environmental Justice Officer Veronica Edy to discuss two of these goals.

First, MVRE wants to secure a moratorium in the Merrimack Valley on the construction of new sources of pollution, which are being called "locally undesirable land uses," or LULUs. Groups have sent a letter to the EOE detailing their request that Poole said was signed by nine local state representatives, including Barry Finegold and David Nangle. She said three state senators, including Sue Tucker, sent separate letters endorsing the same idea.

The other item on Monday's agenda was the implementation of the state's new Environmental Justice Policy, designed to ensure that all residents have equal access to clean environments. Poole said that the MVRE and other local groups are pushing to have the city of Lawrence designated a pilot "environmental justice area," referring to an area with a significantly economically disadvantaged population as well as a disproportionate burden of pollution.

In the wake of the Nickel Hill decision, said Poole, "We're not going to go away, we're just going to get more proactive and less reactive."

Reasons for not building

Piendak, the Dracut town manager, also notes, "They said capital costs had skyrocketed." While Constellation's original construction estimates for the plant were in the $300 million to $350 million range, recent estimates put the cost at $400 million.

But Molz says the rising cost of construction was only a small factor. "There's no doubt that's happening," she says. "But overall, it was: will this energy market support a plan of this magnitude?"

Molz indicates the number of new plants being built in New England played a large role, and this explanation draws the ire of S. James Boumil, attorney for MVRE. During 1999 questioning of Tom Favinger former project manager, before the state's Energy Facilities Siting Board, Boumil was told that Constellation's employees "fully expect (Nickel Hill) to be competitive and that construction of a fleet of these (plants) will yield significant benefits if the older plants are phased out."

If that was true, Boumil questions why Constellation no longer wants to build the plant in Dracut.

"It's a stunning admission by Nickel Hill that (the idea that) an entire fleet is needed to replace these older plants is a crock of baloney," charges Boumil. "It's what we've been arguing all along. Now they want to act like it's no big deal."

"As a supply and demand concept, you certainly have a demand for power, but you have a lot of facilities coming online to meet that demand," says Constellation Power's Molz. "You certainly have to consider how many plants were coming online. It's a moving target. Three years ago, when we looked at this market, we thought there was the demand for power. We're constantly evaluating."

The proposed Nickel Hill facility would have represented between 15 and 20 percent of the megawatt power that Constellation plans to add to its portfolio between now and 2003. Constellation reports having under construction eight facilities with the ability to produce 4,000 megawatts; the Nickel Hill facility would have produced 750 megawatts.

Constellation already owns 28 power plants in the United States and six in Latin America.

How effective was law fight?

Power plant supporters, detractors offer answers

Did the legal effort funded in part by Andover tax money land a punishing blow in the power plant fight? It depends on who you ask.

Constellation Power, the parent company of Nickel Hill, says its decision to stop pursuing a Dracut power plant was influenced by a changing market, rather than the legal fight pitched by Andover and the Merrimack Valley Residents for the Environment.

"It just was looking increasingly pessimistic in terms of it being profitable," says

David Rosenzweig, the company's attorney. "They have been doing these appraisals of the power market over time."

The arrival of several other power plants to New England was also a factor, according to those involved.

"Given the market situations - which have nothing to do with the people of Andover or Dracut - (Constellation) made a decision about the profitability of the facility," says Warren Shaw, 24-year Dracut selectman. "I have no reason to believe it had anything to do with the legal fight."

Everett Penney:
Calls company
line "spin"

While Dracut officials say they buy Constellation's explanation, others in Andover do not.

"I think the attempt by the company to say it's strictly a market or financial decision is, in a way, a spin the company is putting on its position," says Everett Penney, Andover health director.

Laura Jordan, an MVRE board member, calls the decision to not build a power plant "a huge victory for MVRE" and the region, indicating she believes the legal fight directly influenced the outcome.

"It's a testament to the powers of our efforts," she says. "We asked the tough questions and it was worth it."

What next for Dracut?

The decision to nix Nickel Hill may mean Dracut will have to forget about some construction projects they had hoped to fund with revenue from the power plant company.

Dracut has not planned any project by assuming that it would receive the revenue expected from the Nickel Hill plant ($76 million over 20 years). "I think there will be a lot of talk about the financial impact on Dracut, but this isn't money we ever had," says Warren Shaw, Dracut selectman.

Still, Shaw admits the town had hoped to build capital projects such as a new school and renovations to town hall with such revenue.

"From the standpoint of what could have been, Dracut is now in a position of (deciding) how it will fund those projects, and whether, in fact, they will build them," he says.

Hundreds donated blood for teacher

Hundreds of people donated blood in an effort to save Sean Reardon, a popular special education teacher at Greater Lawrence Technical School.

Reardon, of Lawrence, is battling chronic myelogenous leukemia (CML). The only cure for him is a bone-marrow transplant.

Some 450 people attended the bone marrow drive, which was held on Mother's Day at the school. "It's now a waiting game," said Reardon, as results from the drive are not expected for several weeks.

Reardon, 30, is married and has a 2-year-old daughter. His friends and family members have banded together to sponsor fundraising events to help cover treatment-related expenses such as the $26 bone marrow testing fee. tional talks in schools, urging children to wear appropriate clothing and insect repellents during high-risk times of day, such as dawn and dusk.

Northeast Mosquito will also study mosquitoes throughout the summer season to track any presence of West Nile Virus in Andover. The program will cost the town more than $78,000 this year, says Penney.

Northeast representatives warned residents last year that fear of West Nile Virus should not be their primary motivation for signing on to the program. However, the program is effective against mosquitoes carrying West Nile Virus, as well as other types of mosquitoes.

Residents throughout town have already reported seven dead crows this year, mostly within the last month, says Penney.

Andover officials will not know whether those crows died of West Nile Virus, however, because the state Department of Public Health will not resume testing crows until next month. At that time, the state will announce a new method for reporting and testing dead crows, as well as a new hotline for residents to call, Penney adds.

Cutting community service in order to save it

School Committee asked to consider removing it as a graduation requirement

By Adam Groff

The Andover High School community service program, once arguably the jewel in the crown of the school's extracurricular programs, has been losing some of its luster since being made a graduation requirement, say student leaders and faculty advisers. They, along with Principal Peter Anderson, have asked the School Committee to consider making it an all-volunteer program again.

"It's the whole issue of taking something that people are motivated to do on their own and making it a requirement that diminishes it," says math teacher Jay Darrin. Darrin was a faculty adviser for the program from shortly after its inception in 1987 until last year. He says that the teachers and residents who founded the community service program had lofty goals.

"They felt that we worked on the mind via academics, and we work on the body via athletics and physical education," says Darrin. "Their idea was to work on the heart through community service, and they thought that the greatest benefit the kids could have was through direct contact with the people they were helping."

To keep the numbers manageable and the energy level high, Darrin said, the program was made voluntary. Since that time, Andover students have been going into the community in a variety of positive capacities, from shoveling the driveways of elderly residents, to visiting hospitals and nursing homes, to helping out with special-needs programs. Darrin says the program just took off.

"We found that there were some kids stepping up to the plate and organizing, and we thought we'd institutionalize that, so we created a student board of directors," he says. "A student would come up and say, 'Is this an OK community service activity?' and we'd say, 'Do they need more volunteers? Can you organize it?' And they'd get eight or nine volunteers going to a place that they were keeping track of. At one time we were working with 32 different programs, and the number of kids getting credit was up to 400. That was with one teacher with one planning period. It would have never taken place if we hadn't relied on student leadership."

The program was so successful that in 1999, then-principal Larry Robinson included community service in a plan to increase graduation requirements. He recommended it to the School Committee, and the committee accepted his plan. Now, this year's sophomores, along with needing to pass the MCAS to graduate, must complete at least 20 hours of service to the community.

"It was one of several things that (Robinson) wanted to see changed regarding graduation requirements," said Darrin. "The problem was that he was in his first year here, and he was trying to do a lot of things quickly." After his first year as principal, however, Robinson was hospitalized with cancer and died soon thereafter, and his vision for community service as a requirement has not been fully realized.

"What really touched off the issue this year is the problem of trying to document community service that would total 34,000 hours over a four-year period," said Principal Anderson. "At the time the recommendation was made, the issue of how to do that had not been discussed."

Darrin had begun devoting so much time to the program that a few years ago his teaching load was reduced and he was given a stipend for his work as program adviser. As other faculty left the program, however, and as the paperwork of a mandatory requirement loomed, Darrin says he eventually balked at the task.

"I'm getting close to retirement, and I've taken on advanced placement calculus this year," he said. "And to be honest, making it mandatory made record keeping paramount, and I foresaw this black hole sucking up all my time."

So there is no faculty adviser this year. Darrin, along with social studies teacher Becky Ledig and English teacher Eric Pellerin, have agreed to help out, but only informally. "We're all sort of doing it on a voluntary basis, but we're relying heavily on student leaders," he said.

"I've been coordinating all the programs, making sure everybody gets credit, going on all the trips," said senior Jennifer Kane, who is in her fourth year with the community service program. "Last year I was on the board of directors with 10 or 15 kids, and Mr. Darrin was the faculty adviser. This year it's just basically me, (senior) Lindsay (Shaheen) and (senior) Lauren (Kapelson)."

Kane said she does not have enough perspective to say for sure whether making the program mandatory has resulted in the decline in student leadership, but she knows that she doesn't think it should be a requirement.

"The best thing we hear from people is how great the kids are, and that's the image of Andover High School it projects," said Kane. "Once you start sending people who are doing it because they have to, it projects a different image, and they don't need that at (nursing home) Academy Manor. They don't need people with a bad attitude." On May 8, she told the School Committee, "Mandatory volunteerism is an oxymoron."

"The issue, to be honest, is finances," said Anderson in the familiar school department refrain. "I have two opinions. One is, if we keep it as a requirement, we need the funding to make it a top-flight program. Two, if we need to make it a voluntary program, then we need to have teacher sponsors. In either case we need the goals of making it a quality program."

School Committee members said they would see what would need to be done to remove community service as a graduation requirement, if they determine that that is the best course.

Elizabeth Asch, a senior at Andover High, received a United Way "Champions of Change" award. Asch was recognized for outstanding community service during a recent awards reception. She single-handedly created the Colonial Swim Program, a swim class run entirely by volunteers. She gave young children with disabilities the opportunity to become successful swimmers.

◀ Laura Goldstein of Andover (middle) joined Boston Celtics forward Antoine Walker and New Jersey Nets forward Keith Van Horn on the famed parquet floor of the FleetCenter before the April 15 game between the Celtics and the New Jersey Nets. Goldstein was honored by the Boston Celtics as a local hero, as part of the team's "Heroes Among Us" program. Laura's "Coping with Cancer Kid Kits," for children who have a parent with cancer, earned her the hero honor. The contents of the kits come from her own reflections on what would have helped her during that difficult time when her mother was ill. They are available for two age groups and include personalized letters, books about cancer, journals, and other support information. Some 2,000 kits have been distributed this year.

Feeling at home in Washington, DC

EIGHTH-GRADERS FROM PIKE SCHOOL made a class trip to Washington, D.C. Forty-seven students and five of their teachers had spent four days touring the capital city, returning Saturday night, April 28. Departing from Pike the previous Wednesday morning, the travelers journeyed to Washington, where they began their sightseeing with an evening excursion to the Jefferson Memorial. The next two days included visits to the Capitol, the House and Senate galleries, Mount Vernon and the Museum of Natural History. Thursday's activities ended with a visit to the Lincoln Memorial and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial; Friday ended with attending a performance of Shear Madness. After a Saturday morning visit to the White House and the Smithsonian Museum, students boarded buses for their return to Andover.

For several years the Washington trip has been part of the eighth-grade program at Pike. The students experience first-hand many of the places and concepts they first learned about in their American History course.

TOWN TALK

Blackout enthusiasm

A do-it-yourself-blackout? It's easier than it sounds. Just e-mail hundreds of people, hope those who receive it will forward it on to hundreds more, and voila: you've got a date and time for a nation-wide energy shutdown.

That's the plan conceived by an unknown individual who started a similar e-mail, asking Americans and people all over the world to protest President George Bush's energy plan.

Some environmentalists have protested the Bush package, arguing that it doesn't emphasize conservation of fossil fuels, or research for alternative sources of energy. The e-mail asks people to unplug electrical appliances and shut off the lights on June 21, the first day of summer, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., in any time zone. At least one person who received the e-mail — Anne Wein of Marion Avenue — jumped on the bandwagon quickly. A little too quickly.

"We did it the wrong day!" Wein exclaimed, when asked whether she would turn out her lights on June 21. In her enthusiasm to protest Bush's plan to drill more oil refineries in Alaska, Wein unplugged her electrical appliances Monday — the 21 of May.

"We shut off our lights. I thought, at least we could do that," says Wein. "I couldn't understand why no one else's lights were off."

Tinkering with time

The selectmen are taking small steps towards what they hope is a more efficient meeting agenda.

Selectmen agreed to eliminate public appearances by the gas company every time officials need to approve a small project; they agreed to add time estimates next to each agenda item, so that residents interested in hearing about a particular item can gauge the meeting schedule; and they will try approving past meeting minutes at the end of the night, which selectmen plan to wrap up by 10 p.m.

The biggest change will be the recognition of volunteers, which selectmen will begin at 7 p.m. — a half hour earlier than the meetings usually start. AT&T will broadcast the presentation of honors and certificates on cable TV, along with the regular meeting.

While more changes could follow in the future, the selectmen plan to test these breaks from tradition on a trial basis. "We'll see how our ratings do," Selectman Brian Major joked.

Breaking 100 on the course

To make the cut for the Tee Off Golf Tournament, it doesn't matter how long you've been golfing. It doesn't even matter how good you are. What counts is how long you've been alive.

Last year, Herb Muller, 79, of Andover, was one of the oldest golfers from the Greater Lawrence area to participate. Golfers like him help raise money for Elder Services of the Merrimack Valley Inc., which provides services such as Meals on Wheels and home health aides to elderly people.

"It's a way to tie in who we are to the event," says Carolyn Hubers, Elder Services director. "To set apart our golf tournament from others, we said, 'Hey, let's get a team of older golfers.'"

This year, it looks as though the competition could be older and wiser than last year. "I had someone call today about their neighbor, who is 88," says Hubers. "Someone from Methuen called who is 87."

Other people interested in playing can attend the tourney at 8 a.m. on Monday, June 18 at the Merrimack Golf Course in Methuen. Elder Services hopes to raise $20,000. Call Hubers at 800-892-0890, Ext. 350.

The latest book by Paul Wender, one of the doctors who first identified Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, is meant to help adults with ADHD to recognize their problem. Wender moved to Andover in 1999.

The Dean of Hyperactivity

Andover resident Paul Wender first labeled ADHD

By Adam Groff

Paul Wender is known as the "Dean of ADHD." The psychiatrist and his colleagues in the 1960s identified the condition that is today known as attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder, and he published the first monograph on the subject in 1971. Wender was involved in the first clinical trials of Ritalin, today the most commonly prescribed medication for treating the condition that, he says, "is to psychiatry as a runny nose is to a pediatrician."

Wender bristles at the suggestion, heard often today, that ADHD is overdiagnosed, or that drugs like Ritalin are overprescribed.

"What's the evidence?" he asks. "The facts are that by distributing questionnaires, you find that 5 to 10 percent of kids have this disorder, and it's not a benign condition. These are the kids who fall behind in school; they drop out of high school, they become delinquent, they get involved in crime. Far and away, the majority of troublemakers have this disorder."

Wender, who was a professor and the director of psychiatric research at the University of Utah School of Medicine from 1973 to 1999, first came to prominence through his work with children and ADHD. These are the children with whom everyone is familiar: The ones who can't sit still. The ones who can't pay attention in class. The ones who run around "as if driven by a motor." They've always been with us, but it was not until the work of Wender and other psychiatrists at the National Institute of Mental Health that their behavior was identified and labeled as a psychological disorder.

First it was termed "minimal brain dysfunction," and Wender's 1971 text was called Minimal Brain Dysfunction in Children. Then it was labeled "hyperactivity," and in 1973, Wender published perhaps his most famous book, The Hyperactive Child: A Handbook for Parents, now in its fifth printing. Next it was termed "attention deficit disorder," or ADD, and, most recently, ADHD.

When he published The Hyperactive Child, at a time when books about mental conditions were not often written for non-experts, Wender says he was attempting to raise public awareness.

"I found that education of the parents was vital to managing the disorder in their children," says Wender, who was also a pioneer in the use of psychopharmaceuticals. He says that effective treatment of ADHD combines medication, parent management, and special education. "Learning disorders frequently accompany ADHD," says Wender, "although both are unrelated to intelligence. Parents need to know about these things. Medications like Ritalin don't treat learning disabilities, but they treat ADHD. And once you treat the ADHD, you can address the learning disability."

As Wender's work with ADHD continued through the 1970s, his studies revealed something more unexpected: the condition is not something that a person necessarily outgrows with age.

"This was surprising," he says, "because it was psychiatric dogma that this disorder disappeared in adolescence and adulthood. But these adults' minds have simply found the best way of functioning with their weakness."

He says studies in ADHD progressed by leaps and bounds with this discovery, because it was much easier to gather information from adults, with their greater maturity and articulateness about their own experiences. He says that although adults with ADHD have often adapted to the adult world, their condition incapacitates them in the same way it does children: left untreated, ADHD blocks solutions to other problem areas in a person's life. ADHD adults may be functioning at only 70 percent of their capacity, he says, and may suffer from self-image problems that may lead to depression. They may be unable to address, for instance, marital problems without first addressing their ADHD.

Expanding his work in this way, in 1987 Wender published The Hyperactive Child, Adolescent and Adult: Attention Deficit Disorder Through the Lifespan, directed at professionals. His most recent book, published last year, is ADHD: Attention-Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder in Children and Adults, geared again toward laypeople.

"I expanded the book to include adults in order to give adults a place to turn," says Wender. He says people often are less willing to recognize ADHD in adults than in children, and that adults are less willing to recognize in themselves a condition commonly associated with undisciplined children. "The adult who reads this (book) will have a better idea of whether to get screened," he says. In particular, the chapter on "ADHD in Adults" has pages of useful descriptions of overt symptoms, such as attention problems, hyperactivity, impulsivity, disorganization.

Wender believes overprescription of the drug Ritalin is rare; it is more common, he believes, that children who would benefit from medication are not getting it.

WHAT'S UP

Students decorate the gym for last year's Senior Safari.

Senior Safari to host AHS graduation party

The Andover High School field house will be transformed into a lush tropical jungle Monday evening, June 4. Palm trees, wicker furniture, zebra stripes, and stone sculptures will abound from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. as new AHS graduates celebrate their successes and say their farewells.

According to organizers, Senior Safari, the all-night, substance-free party that follows graduation, will be both an exciting and a relaxing opportunity to engage in all the typical end of the year senior activities: hanging out with friends, signing yearbooks, and dancing to music.

For the past nine years, Senior Safari has also provided activities and experiences that go far beyond the typical goodbye celebration. Caricaturists, hand-writing analysts, fortune tellers, massage therapists, and hypnotists all furnish much more unusual fare. Seniors create a time capsule to be opened during their 5th year reunion. They wear T-shirts with Senior Safari logos created by their peers. They can be involved in crafts activities. They can play ping-pong and Foosball. They can jump as high as possible wearing a special velcro suit and stick themselves to the wall.

The food choices for the evening range from pizza, pasta, and Chinese favorites to muffins, fruit, a special cake, and exotic looking tropical drinks.

Senior Safari is run completely by parent volunteers and is dependent on the generosity of community members as well as fund-raising events sponsored throughout the year by Senior Safari committee members.

Eleventh-hour donations are still needed; send checks payable to Senior Safari to PO Box 803, Andover, 01810.

Also needed are volunteers to help set up decorations in the field house the weekend before the event or to chaperone early Tuesday morning's ongoing activities.

Call or e-mail Mary Jane Dennehy (978-409-1333), <rk66@mediaone.net>; or Cornelia Kessler (978-623-7028), <corneliakessler@gmx.de> if you can help out in any capacity before, during, or after the event.

The Senior Safari committee hopes not only to provide this year's seniors with a truly memorable experience, but also ensure that future graduates can look forward to a Senior Safari when it is their turn.

Sale of plants for Andover gardens

The Andover Garden Club will hold a plant sale from 9 a.m. to noon this Saturday, May 26, in front of Old Town Hall, 20 Main St.

A variety of plants will be offered for sale, primarily perennials that are proven performers in Andover gardens. In most cases, the divisions will be considerably larger than those offered for sale by garden centers. Club members will be on hand to offer "how-to" advice on planting and growing the plants.

Inline skating rink is set to open this summer at Rec Park

By Judy Wakefield

Inline skating rules, according to the youth of Andover, and the town has officially answered that youthful cry for a rink closer to home.

Until this year, youth looking for an inline skating rink have had to go out of town. Lawrence has two, Methuen has one, and Bradford has an indoor inline skating rink. Now, Andover has made that list.

A new inline skating rink at Recreation Park is set to open this summer. Several summer youth programs, including a week-long roller-hockey camp in August for kids ages 7 to 14, will be using the new rink. In addition to having programs run by Andover Youth Services and Department of Community Services, the rink eventually will also host birthday parties and pick-up roller hockey games.

The finishing touches to the rink are being applied between now and the end of school.

"We still need the building inspector to check it out, some landscaping needs to be done, and some debris needs to be cleaned up," said Bill Fahey, youth services director. "We'll have it up and running by the summer."

"(Inline skating) is one of those fast-growing sports in terms of recreational status," said Fahey. "When we're up and running, people can give us a call to use it and we can arrange something. It's their rink."

Night-time use is also planned for the rink, as brand new lights were installed. "It's not just 8 to 5 down there. There are lights all around the rink. We'll have night time use, too," Fahey said.

Parents can also mark Saturday, June 2 as an important day in town. That's when the skateboard park behind West Middle School opens for the season. The park will open at noon and feature refreshments and a band. Hours of operation for the park will be noon to 7:30 p.m., six days a week from June through October. It is closed on Mondays when "how to skateboard" clinics are planned.

Fahey said the park has a couple of new pieces and he is looking to host a "girls only" skateboard event. He is also looking to get a high-school basketball league off the ground behind West Middle School. Teams would be co-ed and play from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The ultimate disc summer league will also return. Last year, the league attracted 38 Andover middle-schoolers, enough players to field three teams. Fahey said this alternative sport is very popular around the country.

"Teams have uniforms and play national tournaments. It's big in colleges," he said, adding that Andover teens are no different than teens around the country. They are playing more lifetime sports, meaning sports that people can play at any age.

Registration June 14

Registration for Andover Youth Services summer programs is Thursday, June 14 at Doherty Middle School at 6:30 p.m. More than 45 summer programs for students in grades 6 to 9 are offered and typically fill quickly.

The summer program book will be available at West Middle and Doherty Middle schools after Memorial Day weekend. It will also be available at Department of Community Services office at Town Offices. The book is not mailed to Andover households.

For more information, call 978-623-8242.

Emily Reynolds, a junior at Phillips Academy, shows how a dance scene in West Side Story is supposed to be done.

The story behind the local 'West Side Story'

By Rebecca Piro

Emily Reynolds, 17, describes her theater background as minimal. "I really don't have much," she says, then realizes her understatement. "I've never been in a play."

Yet, after nine months of labor she's set to unveil her own production of West Side Story, onstage at Doherty Middle School, Saturday at 7 p.m. A second production of the all-student performance will follow Sunday at 2 p.m.

Reynolds, a junior at Phillips Academy, took it upon herself to direct, choreograph and produce the musical with a cast of 30 students, between the ages of 13 and 19, from all over the Merrimack Valley. Her father helped her craft the set designs at the family's Porter Road home, and performers' mothers sewed some of the costumes.

"The whole experience is incredible," says Reynolds, who has taken dance classes at PA for three years.

"A lot of (the cast members) have never performed before. They've been working for nine months, and I really think the audience will feel that when they're watching."

"It's all a learning experience," says Adam Stone, 19, playing the male lead as Tony.

"This is where we're supposed to be learning the craft," he says. "He's impressed with Reynolds' focus and dedication, as well as that of the rest of the cast. 'It's harder to get people to work when you're not a grown-up,' he adds. 'I give Emily major kudos for that.'"

Tickets are $5 for students and seniors, and $8 for adults. A portion of the profit will go to Andover Youth Services to help with the construction of a youth center in town.

The play, a more modern take on Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, follows the tragic love story of Maria and Tony. "They're from rival gangs in the city, and they're not allowed to love each other," says Reynolds.

tion, mood swings, and short temper.

Wender says that researchers' best guess as to what causes ADHD is that sufferers have a lower amount of the neurotransmitter dopamine in their brains. It happens that stimulants like Ritalin cause the release of dopamine, leading to the paradoxical result that people who suffer from hyperactivity are treated with a kind of stimulant.

According to Wender, children in inner cities are more likely to have ADHD, which is believed to have a genetic component. In addition, it is exacerbated by elevated levels of lead, which is more prevalent in poorer urban areas. He says there may be highly competitive and affluent suburbanites who "browbeat a therapist into giving them Ritalin" because their kindergartner is not performing to the highest standard, but Wender believes these cases are exceptional; it is more common, he feels, that children who would benefit from medication are not getting it.

"Medication is not a cure for social ills or for psychologically engendered problems," says Wender, "although it can act as damage control in those situations." What it is intended to do, Wender says, is address physiological imbalances.

Wender and his wife, a child psychologist in Exeter, N.H., moved to Andover in 1999. Wender still does some private practice at Arbor Counseling Service in Woburn, and he continues his ADHD research at the McLean Hospital in Belmont, a part of Harvard Medical School. He also lectures at the Harvard School of Psychiatry.

IN BRIEF

Residents are directors at Mary Immaculate Health Care Services

Mary Immaculate Health Care Services Inc. (MIHCS) of Lawrence has elected a new board of directors for 2001-2002. There are four new members and the nine returning members include Andover residents Robert J. O'Sullivan, Alice M. O'Reilly and Gerald T. Mulligan. John E. Fenton Jr. of Andover was named honorary trustee.

Elected officers of the MIHCS Board of Directors were Richard Corrente, president; Robert J. O'Sullivan, vice chairperson; Kelly A. Sullivan, treasurer, and Patricia Palermo, secretary.

Mary Immaculate Health Care Services is a full service, not-for-profit continuum of care serving older adults in the Merrimack Valley.

Real estate agent recognized as one of the tops in Massachusetts

The Andover office of De Wolfe recently celebrated its success at "De Wolfe Super Forums," a regional sales award program.

Among the company's top award winners was Julie Gerraughty Rubino of the Andover office. Rubino was recognized as the No. 2 listing agent in the state. That's an honor earned by providing strong client service, according to the company.

With 16 under his fire belt, Richard Dalton named lieutenant

Richard Dalton has said goodbye to his 16 years spent as a firefighter with the Andover Fire Department, and said hello to a continued career with his peers as a lieutenant.

Town officials swore in Dalton to his new rank Monday night at the selectmen's meeting. His family, including his father — former fire chief Harold Hayes — traveled from Florida to attend the occasion.

Deputy James Lynch stood to praise Dalton before the selectmen and audience, citing an incident from years ago when Dalton rescued a baby from a burning building on Temple Circle.

Facing a round of applause, Dalton thanked his superiors and officials for their support.

Custom tailor looks to fit bill

Shaban's Tailor Shop to open on Chestnut Street this Tuesday

By Adam Groff

Shaban Catalbas says that Andoverites deserve top-notch custom tailors, and he believes that Shaban's Tailor Shop, slated to open the day after Memorial Day at 28 Chestnut St., will fit the bill.

"Any corner can have a tailor shop," says Catalbas, "but to find a professional custom tailor is not easy. Andover has a lot of business people who dress, who know how to dress. They need another good tailor."

Catalbas, 48, has been in the business for more than 30 years. He started as an apprentice to a tailor in his native country of Turkey when he was 13, and spent seven years learning the trade. In 1983, he and his family moved to the United States, and Catalbas went to work for Hickey-Freeman, a men's apparel manufacturer based in Rochester, N.Y. He then moved to Massachusetts, and has been a tailor at Kaps in the Burlington Mall for the past 15 years. The Andover store is his first business of his own.

"I'm very excited," he says. "I'm already a known person in the field, and I have a lot of customers from Andover, so that's why I chose here."

Catalbas says he can remember the days when tailors heated their irons in coal fires. Today, the technology and the fashions continue to change.

"You learn every day," he says. "You're studying all you're life. You never stop. It's like an MIT professor who has to keep studying to keep up with new technology: there are always new fashions, new fabrics. You have to keep an open mind."

And despite the new tools of his trade, Catalbas says he and the three or four tailors he expects to employ will still do hand stitching when necessary.

Cut from the same cloth — Shaban, Mubeccel, Zeynep and Zafer Catalbas will make their new tailor shop a family affair, says owner Shaban Catalbas, a long-time tailor opening his first solo business.

He prides himself on never turning down a job, whether silk or leather, men's or women's, wedding gowns or prom dresses.

"I'm a challenge person, I like challenges," he says. "People bring me jobs that other people say can't be done, and I find a way to do it."

Shaban's will be a family business, with his wife, Mubeccel, doing some tailoring; his son, Zafer, who has a degree in finance from Merrimack College, helping with the business end; and his daughter, Zeynep, also lending a hand as she starts school at Emerson College.

When it opens on Tuesday, May 29, residents will be able to reach Shaban's Tailor Shop by dialing 978-475-5996.

Fellowship supports cancer research

Josephine Modica-Napolitano, associate professor of biology at Merrimack College, has been named the first Paul E. Murray Fellow, for 2001-2002. The award, named for an Andover resident, will help the doctor to continue her cancer research, which could lead to more targeted chemotherapeutic treatments with reduced side effects, according to Merrimack.

"I am honored to receive this award and am delighted that people like the Murray family have generously donated their resources to make research happen at Merrimack College," said Modica-Napolitano, in a college release. "It is often difficult for scientists at small undergraduate colleges to compete with universities and larger research institutes for research funds, so I am very grateful to (trustee Alice) Murray for making it happen for us." In the fall of 2001, Modica-Napolitano will present her results at the first Paul E. Murray Symposium.

Modica-Napolitano is also the recipient of a two-year, $75,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health and has been researching cancer since 1986. Several of her students are researching cancer cells' mitochondria, the organ inside the cell that generates energy, in hopes of finding what makes it different from other cells' mitochondria.

The $10,000 Paul E. Murray Fellowship was founded in 2000 at Merrimack "to promote science and engineering research that will lead to enhanced effectiveness in classroom teaching." It grew from The Paul E. Murray Fund which has enriched Merrimack's science and engineering education since the 1980s. A bequest from Andover resident Paul E. Murray, a district manager of engineering for the East Central District with General Electric, was rededicated by his daughter, Merrimack Trustee Alice Murray, to fulfill its original commitment to faculty development and to elevate its impact to support significant projects of research and study at Merrimack.

Modica-Napolitano has been a member of the Merrimack College faculty since 1995. She will be on sabbatical next year devoting 100 percent of her time toward research efforts.

Professional Profile

Teresa J. Burtoft, D.P.M.

Foot Health Center of Merrimack Valley, P.C.

Teresa J. Burtoft, D.P.M. helps people get back on their feet. Dr. Burtoft has recently acquired the practice of Dr. Anne Carroll at Chestnut Green in North Andover, where she specializes in podiatric medicine, reconstructive surgery, and sports medicine. Dr. Burtoft believes education of her patients is vital to successful treatment, including fully informing them of the nature of their condition, instructing them in the care of their feet, and giving them a variety of treatment options. When treating any foot condition Dr. Burtoft tries to exhaust all conservative measures before surgery.

Problems with feet occur at every age, and early treatment is important to head off later problems that may even affect other parts of the body, including knees and back.

Diabetic patients are especially at risk for serious complications, and instruction in foot health is essential for their overall well being. Children, if they have flat feet or are experiencing pain, can also benefit from early intervention.

Dr. Burtoft especially likes to work with athletes. An avid golfer and runner, she understands that athletes want to avoid down time, and she makes every effort to keep them active.

Dr. Burtoft studied podiatry at the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Sciences in Des Moines, Iowa, and then completed a two-year surgical residency at Cambridge Hospital in Massachusetts. Her work there also included a wide range of experience in the many fields of medicine related to the foot. Subsequently she practiced as an associate in Concord, MA and Westford, MA.

Dr. Burtoft's office is located at 575 Turnpike St. (Rte. 114), Chestnut Green Suite 21, North Andover. Call (978) 686-7623 for an appointment.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

REPAIRING CHIPS AND CRACKS

Patients with chipped or cracked teeth may resort to bonding, which involves coating teeth with a tooth-colored composite material. Although this is the least durable (and least expensive) repair option, when the composite wears off, it can easily be repaired or replaced later. Another, more durable (and expensive) option for hiding defects in the enamel involves fitting a custom porcelain veneer over the surface of the tooth. This procedure typically takes a few visits to the dentist (bonding requires only one), and involves removing a thin layer of tooth enamel to make room for the veneer. While veneers are more natural looking and more durable than bonding, biting into hard objects (ice or hard candy) can chip them.

Today, there is no need to worry about an imperfect smile - it can be repaired using any number of the methods now available. And aside from the obvious aesthetic benefits of cosmetic dentistry, it can often prevent more serious problems down the road. For more information about the many advantages of cosmetic dentistry or an appointment, please call us at 978-475-2431. Our office is located at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93.

P.S. Badly decayed teeth are not suitable candidates for veneers because the tooth surface itself must be sturdy enough to support the veneer.

AHS Roundup: Warrior spring varsity teams are closing in on tournament berths

Huge performances by AHS track & field stars

By Rick Harrison

Spectacular event-winning performances by Bruce Brown, Tim Galebach and Bruno Zanotti highlighted the Andover High day at the annual Merrimack Valley Conference Championship Track & Field Meet.

All three produced record or near-record efforts in the meet at Tewksbury High, with Brown racing to victory in the 200 meter dash (22.5 seconds), Galebach pounding out a 9:38.4 time in the two mile, and high jumper Zanotti equaling the meet record and falling a half-inch shy of the school record by clearing 6'6."

Lisa Tisbert, Taylor Traub and Kaitlin Haugh led the way as the AHS varsity softball team closed in on a Division 1 North Tournament berth with three clutch wins, sweeping to a second straight Methuen Invitational Tournament title and then blasting Lawrence, 17-0, in a rain-soaked Merrimack Valley Conference game on Tuesday.

Bentley College-bound Tisbert, who plans to play soccer and softball for the Falcons, boosted her conference and team-leading batting average to .508 as she and Traub both laced five hits in the romp over Lawrence.

The AHS varsity baseball team also took a giant stride recently in the direction of clinching a Division 1 North Tournament berth.

The baseballers posted a huge come-from-behind 4-3 win over the No. 10 ranked team in Eastern Massachusetts, Peabody, to grab a crucial victory in their quest for a post-season spot.

Both the boys lacrosse and boys and girls tennis teams have qualified, while girls lacrosse is on the brink and the boys volleyball team came up just short while completing its season with a loss to Chelmsford.

The MIAA Tournament pairings for boys lacrosse will be announced tomorrow, while both the baseball and softball pairings are scheduled to be released next Tuesday night.

The tennis pairings will be made public next Wednesday and girls

All tournaments are single-elimination.

OUTDOOR TRACK

Lovely Field in Andover will be the site of the annual Eastern Mass. Class B Championship Meet this Saturday (9:30 a.m.).

Those who qualify will advance to the All-State Meet one week from Saturday (June 2) at Worcester State College (10 a.m.).

The season concludes with the New England Championship Meet on Saturday, June 9 at Winnacunnet High in Hampton, N.H. (11 a.m.).

The Eastern Mass. State Boys Decathlon and Girls Pentathlon are also scheduled June 5-6 at Burlington High.

MVC Championship Meet

Both the Andover girls and boys teams placed fifth in the annual MVC Championship Meet at Tewksbury High.

The girls chalked up 53 1/3 points to finish well behind champion

The boys had 57 points and trailed runaway champ Central Catholic with 125 1/2, Lowell (92), Tewksbury (77) and Methuen (62).

The outstanding work of Brown, Galebach and Zanotti accounted for more than half of the AHS boys points (30).

Brown displayed his versatility by adding eight more points with a second place in the long jump, soaring 19'6 3/4" to fall less than three inches short of the winning jump of 19'9."

Jason Crabb contributed a fifth place in the long jump (18'1 1/2"), while Kyle Miller was sixth in the triple jump (38'5 1/2") to complete the Golden Warriors' scoring in the field events.

Mike Donahue was sixth in the 100 meters (12.1 seconds), Shawn Gaines sixth in the 200 meters (23.7), Shahriar Ghanchi sixth in the 400 meters (52.4) and Phil Shaw sixth in the mile (4:35.2).

The AHS 4x800 relay finished third in 3:32.8.

The Andover girls did not have an MVC champion, but received solid second-place performances from Sheena Patel in the triple jump (34'4 1/2") and Caitlin Geary in the two mile (12:02.2).

Patel was just five inches shy of the winning distance.

The Lady Warriors dominated the triple jump, taking three of the top four spots for 18 points as Katie Cail was third (33'4") and Stephanie Casper a half-inch behind (33'3 1/2").

Stephanie Pierce captured third in the 100-meter high hurdles (16.4) and Katie Gustin was sixth in the same race (17.2).

Connie Brown sped to fourth in the 200 meters (27.3) and Natasha Camilo was a stride behind in fifth (27.6).

Camilo was also fourth and Emily Pfeil finished in a three-way tie for sixth in the high jump, both clearing 4'8" with the order decided by the number of misses.

Pfeil was sixth in the two mile (12:27.6), Casper sixth in the 400 meters (62.5), Cail sixth in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles (49.6) and miler Caitlin Hamer was sixth (5:37.7).

In the relay events, the AHS girls 4x800 quartet finished fourth (10:18.6) and the 4x400 crew was fifth (4:18.4).

MVC Invitational Meet

Several Andover athletes placed among the top six at this annual meet held at Cawley Stadium in Lowell.

No team scores were kept at this competition, which features those who did not compete in the MVC Championship Meet.

The AHS girls had two first-place finishes by miler Julia Kwolyk (6:03) and Vicki Britton in the discus (74 feet).

Alyson Fortier was second in both the pole vault (6'6") and 800 meters (2:39.3), and Corey Hanson runner-up in the two-mile (13:45).

Amy Galuzzo was fourth in the 400 meters (71.9), Sherri Bernstein sixth in the 100 meters (14.6) and Kristina Araujo sixth in the mile (6:22.5).

The 4x100 sprint relay also placed third (57.3).

On the boys side, Vincent Errico was second in the 100-meter high hurdles (18.2), Hugo Zhang fifth in the triple jump (34'4 1/2") and Ryan Donahue sixth in the 100 meter dash (12.5).

Andover girls 75 Chelmsford 65

Sheena Patel was a triple winner, while Natasha Camilo and Ogechi Ibe placed first in two events each, in this MVC 1 title-clinching victory over archrival Chelmsford at Lovely Field.

The Lady Warriors finished first in eight of the 16 events contested (no 4x400 relay), and swept the triple jump and 100-meter high hurdles.

They also grabbed 11 of a possible 15 third places.

Patel was tops in the triple jump (34'5"), 100 hurdles (16.0) and 300-meter intermediate hurdles (48.7).

Camilo won both the high jump (4'10") and 200 meter dash (28.5), and Ibe was best in the shot put (32'2") and discus (112'6").

Two-miler Caitlin Geary was the other AHS winner in 12:28.

Stephanie Pierce and Stephanie Casper completed the sweep in the triple jump, while 2 1/2 in the 100 hurdles were Pierce and Katie Gustin.

Connie Brown contributed a second in the 200 meters and third in the 100 meters, while Pierce produced her third second place finish in the long jump.

Other runners-up for the MVC champs were Stelaine Auctherlonie (discus), Casper (400 meters), Katie Cail (300 hurdles) and Emily Pearson (800 meters).

Additional third places went to pole vaulter Courtney Hale, Ashley Faulk (javelin), shot putter Betsy Miller, high jumper Becca Fink, two-miler Laura O'Connell, miler Emily Pieil, Janelle Larose (400 meters) and Lindsay Durkin (800 meters).

BOYS TENNIS

The Andover High boys tennis team is about to secure its ninth straight Merrimack Valley Conference championship, and 15th in the last 17 years, after recent 5-0 sweeps past Chelmsford and Lowell.

Coach Mike Wartman's squad, 12-0 in league play and 12-2 overall, has chalked up 12 consecutive 5-0 victories against MVC foes.

The only losses have come against defending State Division 1 and 2 champs St. John's Prep and Concord-Carlisle, and AHS has now won 138 straight conference matches.

Schedule

Yesterday, after Townsmen presstime, the Golden Warriors had a match against MVC runner-up Central Catholic at the Merrimack College courts.

Today the locals are slated to complete the regular season at Lawrence in the makeup of a match rained out this past Tuesday.

North Sectionals

AHS first doubles tandem Steve Hibino and Jason Lynn saw their North Sectional Individual Tournament run come to a halt with a 6-2, 6-3 setback in quarterfinal round play last weekend at the Lexington town courts.

Hibino and Lynn won three matches the previous weekend to reach the quarters, where they were ousted by the Bedford High first doubles team of Brian Pantano and Eric Kachelmeyer.

All other AHS players had been eliminated earlier.

Pantano and Kachelmeyer continued on to the North title match before being ousted.

"Steve and Jason struggled in the first set. They made a lot of unforced errors," said coach Wartman. "Gradually they settled down, became more consistent and played stronger — but by that time they had dug themselves too deep a hole."

Andover 5
Lowell 0

The locals lost only four games in singles, shuffling the lineup because No. 3 Rich Roda was out sick and No. 1 Gabe Adams was honoring a prior commitment.

Andy Chiaraluce took the top spot and pounded past Lowell's Bill Ryan 6-0, 6-2.

Jason Lynn, who usually plays first doubles but is also the fourth man on the singles ladder, handled Brian Bergeron at No. 2 with similar 6-0, 6-2 ease.

James Kim completed the sweep at the AHS home courts with a 12-game 6-0, 6-0 blitz of the Red Raiders' Andrew Lawrenson.

Steve Hibino teamed with junior Will Chen for the first time at No. 1 doubles, and the pair clicked for a 6-2, 6-2 romp over Joe Sargent and Corey Smith.

Natasha Camilo (left) placed 4th while Connie Brown finished 5th in the 200 meter sprint.

Avi Lasser and Alex Cline were never challenged in a 6-0, 6-0 whitewash of Tim Dalton and Brendan White.

"Will Chen did an excellent job stepping in at first doubles," said Wartman. "Lowell is strong at that position. The match was competitive and Will kept his composure."

Andover 5
Chelmsford 0

Gabe Adams had the toughest fight of the afternoon at first singles, beating back the challenge of the Lions' Chris Irving 6-4, 6-4.

Andy Chiaraluce topped Colin Klick 6-1, 6-2 at second singles, while Alex Cline took over third singles and had little trouble in a 6-2, 6-1 triumph over Peter Almlöf.

In their final tuneup for the North Sectional quarterfinals, Steve Hibino and Jason Lynn cruised past Chelmsford first doubles Dave Salvucci and Todd Shattuck 6-1, 6-2.

James Kim and Avi Lasser completed the romp with a 6-0, 6-1 domination of Chris Prutzer and Chris Sims.

SOFTBALL

Defending Methuen Invitational Tournament champion Andover repeated as titlist, posting a pair of impressive victories against North Andover, 4-1 in the semifinals, and host Methuen, 4-3 in eight innings in the championship game at Burnham Field.

Those wins, along with a 17-0 blitz of Lawrence and a 5-2 loss to Chelmsford, improved the Lady Warriors to 9-9 overall and left them with two possible ways to qualify for the Division 1 North Tournament.

One victory in the final three games against pesky Haverhill (4-14) and powerful Central Catholic (13-2) qualifies the locals on percentage.

AHS can also qualify by tying Notre Dame Academy for second place in MVC 2, something that became much more attainable when the Lancers lost a pair of recent conference games to Lowell and Tewksbury (8-0) to fall to 6-7 in league play.

Schedule

The Lady Warriors hosted Haverhill yesterday and will have already qualified for the tournament if they won.

The locals wrap up the regular season Saturday noon at Merrimack College against MVC 1 runner-up Central Catholic.

Stat leaders

After 18 games Capt. Lisa Tisbert was the top hitter on the team and in the entire MVC with an impressive .508 average on 30-for-59. She also had 14 RBI and one home run.

Andrea Manners was at .362 with 21 hits in 58 at-bats. Manners had 11 RBI.

Also over .300 was Taylor Traub, whose big day at Lawrence boosted her to .328 on 21-for-64.

Shannon Sciolla led the team in RBI with 15.

Andover 17
Lawrence 0

Leadoff batter Taylor Traub went 5-for-5, with a double, five RBI and two runs scored, and Lisa Tisbert was 5-for-6 with a homer, four ribbies and a run scored as the Lady Warriors reached double figures for the third time this season and totaled more runs than in their previous four games combined (15).

"We were not trying to run up a score," said coach Steph Ragucci. "We would never do that. We used 14 players and it was just a case of everyone hitting the ball."

"I was happy because we didn't come out flat and have a letdown after winning the (Methuen) tournament. Lawrence can be a scary team. Their record isn't good but they've played some strong teams tough. You never know what you're going to get from them."

"The two times we played them this season (12-4 earlier win) we came out swinging right away and didn't let up," said Ragucci. "But we've had plenty of games with them in past years where we had to scratch and claw for runs."

"It was also nice to have a chance to play a lot of kids."

Kaitlin Haugh (9-9) squared her pitching record with four innings of one-hit work, fanning two and issuing no walks.

Lisa Tisbert took the mound for the second time this spring (Chelmsford), tossing three innings of two-hit relief with no walks and one strikeout.

The shutout was the third for Andover (Haverhill and Dracut).

The locals jumped all over the host Lancers for seven runs in the top of the first at Hayden-Schofield Playstead.

Taylor Traub walked, both runners were safe on a Kerri Axelrod fielder's choice grounder, and after Tisbert made her only out of the game (pop-up), Andrea Manners and Shannon Sciolla ripped RBI singles.

Dana Medaglio walked, Kara Spang reached on an error to load the bases and Jackie Collins drew a two-out RBI walk.

Traub followed with her second hit of the inning — a two-run single — and the final runner crossed when an error was made on the hit.

Tisbert made it 8-0 in the second with her first homer of the season, a gap-shot to right-center that rolled to the fence untouched as she circled the bases.

In the third Spang singled, Liz Pallotta reached on a fielder's choice. Collins singled to left and Traub drilled an RBI single. Axelrod and Tisbert followed with run-scoring singles, and the 12th run of the game crossed when Sciolla reached on an error.

In the AHS fourth there were singles by Spang, Katie Mullen and Traub (two RBI) to make it 14-0.

The final three runs crossed in the seventh. Jess Minor walked, Spang singled, Collins lashed an RBI single, Traub walked to load the bases and Tisbert ripped a two-run single to center.

While Traub and Tisbert accounted for 10 of the Lady Warriors' 20 hits, Spang finished 3-for-5 and solo safeties were added by Axelrod, Manners, Sciolla, Miner, Mullen, Collins and Tyina Cuevas.

Chelmsford 5
Andover 2

The locals, who always play perennial MVC 1 power Chelmsford tough, had a 1-0 lead until the visiting Lions scored all five of their runs in the top of the fourth.

The key stroke in the pivotal inning was a grand slam by Christina Pak, a homer that enabled champ Chelmsford to boost its perfect conference record to 13-0 and the overall mark to 15-3.

Six players rapped one hit each for Andover against Chelmsford ace pitcher Annie Metz.

Sophomore Jackie Collins and junior Andrea Manners had a single and RBI each, while other safeties were by Lisa Tisbert, Taylor Traub, Dana Medaglio and Katie Mullen.

Sparkling the nine-hit Lions' charge with two each were Pak, Kate Thompson and Metz.

Kaitlin Haugh pitched the first five innings for AHS, allowing eight hits while walking three and whiffing two.

Lisa Tisbert got her first taste of pitching this season when she hurled the final two innings in relief.

METHUEN TOURNAMENT
SEMIFINALAndover 4
North Andover 1

The Lady Warriors responded nicely in the first of several crucial-win situations, pounding out 12 hits and jumping ahead early against the Scarlet Knights and ace pitcher Lauren Otto.

Shannon Sciolla led the charge with three safeties and an RBI, while adding two hits each were Tournament Team MVP Lisa Tisbert, Kerri Axelrod, Dana Medaglio and Jackie Collins.

Leadoff batter Taylor Traub laced a single, reached base twice and scored two runs.

Tisbert also had two RBI for the locals, who scored twice in the first inning and added single insurance runs in the second and sixth.

North Andover spoiled Kaitlin Haugh's shutout bid with a run in the sixth, but she worked out of several jams including one in the seventh and finished with a five-hitter.

The two-run first inning came courtesy of singles by Traub, Tisbert (RBI) and Sciolla (RBI), along with a sacrifice bunt by Kerri Axelrod.

Tisbert went to the opposite field again in the second, angling an RBI double to right.

In the NA seventh, the Scarlet

Knights put two runners aboard with one out. The game ended when AHS second baseman Traub stabbed a line drive and doubled a runner off base.

"We handled North Andover well," said coach Ragucci. "I felt we were in control the whole way. We rapped their pitcher from the beginning of the game until the end."

"We were aggressive. We took a lot of chances and made a few baserunning mistakes that cost us. But we were trying to make things happen and that's good."

"Katie (Haugh) pitched well and we were as good as we get defensively (one harmless error)," said Ragucci. "Every fielder made the plays we needed to make and there were a few easy 1-2-3 innings."

"We lost some of our focus at the end of the game. They were able to load the bases in the sixth and put two runners on in the seventh. But we buckled down at the right time."

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME
Andover 4
Methuen 3

The Lady Warriors fought back from 1-0 and 2-1 deficits to force extra innings, and won the game with a run in the top of the eighth.

Team MVP Lisa Tisbert singled home the tying run in the seventh inning, and she scored the game-winner in the eighth on a first-pitch single to center by Andrea Manners.

After falling behind 3-2 in the top of the seventh, the Rangers tied it with a run in the home half but also left the bases loaded.

Winning pitcher Kaitlin Haugh closed out the victory by retiring Methuen 1-2-3 in the bottom of the eighth.

"This was a completely crazy game," said coach Ragucci. "They scored a run in the first on an odd play. There was a grounder to the mound and the throw to first was high. Shannon Sciolla went up for it and the baserunner knocked her down — which enabled a runner to score from second. But we also threw out another runner at the plate in that inning."

AHS scored its first run in the sixth when Kerri Axelrod walked, Manners reached on a fielder's choice with Axelrod tagged out in a rundown, and then Sciolla kept the inning alive with a single.

Dana Medaglio followed with a bloop single to right that popped over the Methuen first baseman's head to tie the game 1-1.

The Rangers regained the lead in the bottom of the sixth when Amy Johnson singled, and eventually scored on a wild throw following a line drive out to third.

AHS was down to its final out in the seventh before rallying to regain a 3-2 lead. After a strikeout, Jackie Collins and Taylor Traub singled before a fielder's choice left two out and two aboard.

Tisbert then drilled a clutch two-run single to left field.

"We were down to our last out — but Lisa Tisbert was up," said coach Ragucci. "That's why I knew it wasn't over."

Manners ripped her game-winning RBI single in the top of the eighth.

In the home half, with the international tiebreaker runner on second

Apology for dispute

To the ladies in the parking lot dispute with me at South School (around 1:30 PM on April 28) I must apologize. My words were entirely out of bounds, most unfortunate, and said in the heat of the moment. I hope my apology helps undo any damage to your enjoyment of our fine and generally polite community. Sincerely,

The other driver

Fantasy Cleaners

Where can you take your precious wedding gown when you need to have it cleaned? Many cleaners refuse them altogether or require the customer to sign a release of responsibility in case of damage. Don't hesitate to bring your gown to Fantasy Cleaners. Owner Julie Kim specializes in cleaning and preserving wedding gowns. She also cleans bridesmaid's gowns, evening gowns, and christening gowns. With 14 years of experience, Julie never asks for a release of responsibility. She personally handles all the gowns, and her customers know they can trust her completely. ## AHS ROUNDUP

SOFTBALL

Haugh retired the side harmlessly on a pop to second base, strikeout and groundout to first base unassisted.

Taylor Traub, Tisbert and Medaglio led the offense with two hits each, while Jackie Collins also had a safety.

Defensively, Tisbert made several spectacular plays at shortstop.

Tisbert also received a trophy for passing the most total bases in the tournament.

GIRLS TENNIS

The Andover High girls tennis team nailed down its 13th consecutive Merrimack Valley Conference championship with recent 5-0 sweeps of Chelmsford and Lowell.

Coach Tony Russo's juggernaut, which has a makeup match this afternoon at Notre Dame Academy in Tynsboro (3:30 p.m.), will close with an 18-0 record which extends Andover's spectacular MVC win streak through 11 years and 183 straight matches.

The locals are also 253-1 in their last 254 conference matches.

Schedule

The Lady Warriors hosted MVC runner-up Central Catholic yesterday, after Townsmen presstime.

North Sectionals

Michelle Leahy went the farthest for the locals in the single-elimination tourney.

The AHS senior captain and No. 1 singles made it to the second day after drawing a first-round bye and then sweeping two opponents in straight sets.

Leahy was ousted in the fourth round by Acton-Boxboro first singles Evie Stevens, who registered a straight-set win.

Both Andover doubles teams won their first match and were eliminated in the second round, while senior captain and second singles Erin Zuena lost her first match.

Lowell 1

In the most exciting girls tennis match in the MVC this season, Andover High No. 1 singles Michelle Leahy lost for the first time in conference play to once-beaten Nicole Rodger of Lowell in a three-set, three-hour marathon at the Shedd Park courts in Lowell.

Rodger improved her record to 15-1, her only loss coming against Leahy the first time the teams met on April 30 in Andover.

The first two sets were both decided by a 7-6 tiebreaker, Rodger winning the first 7-4 and Leahy squaring the match with a 7-5 victory in the second breaker.

The third set also went back and forth before the Lowell senior pulled out a 7-5 win.

The battle went to Rodger — but the war was won by Andover.

The other two singles matches were AHS romps, Erin Zuena dusting Lowell's Eileen Cohn 6-0, 6-1 and Marsha Mogilevich making short work of Christina Bates 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles were also Lady Warrior routs, Liz Magner and Carolyn Purcell stopping Meghan Keefe and Lauren Faust 6-0, 6-2 at No. 1 and the Jessica Bindman/Jenicka Hornung duo cruising past Courtney Keefe and Krista Lambroukos 6-0, 6-1.

Andover 5
Chelmsford 0

The Lions were no match for Andover, although Erin Zuena did need to rally for a come-from-behind three-set win over the visitors'.

Destinations Travel and Cruise Outlet

Bermuda, Hawaii, Jamaica- take your pick. You'll have a fabulous time when Tony Guay and his seasoned staff of professionals at Destinations Travel and Cruise Outlet help you plan your vacation.

Tony says that people are raving about Norwegian Cruise Line's innovative Freestyle Cruising concept, which offers unprecedented convenience and freedom. Its most popular feature is the flexibility to dine when you choose, with a variety of dining options and a dress code that allows you to decide whether you wear resort casual or formal attire. From now through October 21 you can enjoy a seven-day Freestyle Cruise to Bermuda. Sailing from Boston every Sunday, this cruise offers activities geared to today's interests along with plenty of time to enjoy a variety of excursions on the island. Or consider a seven-day Freestyle Cruise through the Hawaiian Islands. The new Norwegian Star, with more balconies than any other ship in Hawaii, will take you to the major islands and introduce you to the unspoiled charm of the Fanning Islands.

One of Tony's favorite destinations, the beautiful island of Jamaica, is enjoying a resurgence of popularity thanks to Air Jamaica non-stop flights scheduled to leave Boston in the morning and return from Montego Bay in the late afternoon. Coupled with convenient inter-island flights, this makes transportation incredibly convenient and stretches your vacation to include your travel days.

Tony advises you to plan ahead. You can choose from several cruise lines if you book now for a fall foliage cruise.

GIRLS TENNIS

Meghan Roark at second singles.

Roark won the first set in a tiebreaker, but Zuena heated up to capture the last two sets 6-3, 6-0 to preserve the MVC champs' 5-0 white-wash.

Michelle Leahy did not surrender a game in a 6-0, 6-0 sweep of the Lions' Katie Gatti at first singles, and Marsha Mogilevich pounded out a lopsided 6-0, 6-1 win over Kavita Shah at third singles.

Carolyn Purcell and Liz Wagner had no trouble at first doubles, rolling to a 6-3, 6-1 triumph over the Chelmsford duo of Sayda Mallette and Liz Cohen.

Second doubles was a 6-0, 6-1 thrashing of Megan Sullivan and Jamin Lin by the Andover tandem of Jessica Bindman and Jenicka Hornung.

BASEBALL

Andover, 7-9 overall, traveled to Revere yesterday and plays a rematch at Peabody tomorrow night (7 p.m.).

Andover 4
Peabody 3

The biggest hit of junior infielder Sean Smith's high school baseball career moved the locals a giant step closer to a Division 1 North Tournament berth.

After a solo home run by Jeff Allison of visiting Peabody in the top of the eighth, Smith came through with a dramatic two-out, two-strike, two-run single in the bottom of the extra inning to send the AHS fans home happy from Peter Aumais Field.

Surprising sophomore righthander Jon Shaw went the distance on the mound for the Golden Warriors, limiting the Tanners to five hits over eight innings and fanning eight as he remained undefeated this spring with a 3-0 record.

Andover erased a 2-0 deficit in the sixth when Jeff Marshall doubled, Kevin Shepard singled, Jeff Volinski ripped an RBI double and Chris Hanlon lofted a sacrifice fly.

In the eighth, tablesetters for the locals were Shepard with a single, Volinski a walk, Chris Caverly a sac-bunt and Hanlon an intentional walk to load the bases.

Tewksbury 13
Andover 5

The visiting Redmen had ace righthander Scott Favreau (24-2 career won-lost record) on the mound, and were fueled by the knowledge that a victory in this game would clinch their third straight MVC 2 title.

Leading 2-0 in the first inning and 5-2 after four frames, Tewksbury put the game away by erupting for eight runs in the top of the fifth.

Favreau did not prove a mystery to the AHS hitters, who banged out 10 safeties including a double and triple. But two Golden Warrior hurlers were unable to hold TMHS in check.

The locals had two hits each from Kevin Shepard (triple), Chris Caverly (double) and Jeff Volinski.

Jeff Marshall, Chris Hanlon, Marty DeFrancisco and Jason White added a safety each, while Volinski and Caverly collected two RBI apiece.

AHS starting pitcher Mark Matos took the loss.

Drilling two hits each for Tewksbury were Bob Moulaison (four RBI), Mark Boudreau (two RBI), T.J. Forsythe (triple, two RBI), Mike Rocco and James McCarthy.

The win enabled Tewksbury to finish 8-5 in MVC play and edge second-place Dracut (7-6) by one game.

GIRLS LACROSSE

The Andover High girls lacrosse team, in just its first year of varsity play, inched closer to qualifying for the MIAA Tournament after putting together a recent three-game undefeated skein.

The streaky locals, who won their first five games and then went six games without a victory, rebounded to beat Ipswich twice (including 11-0) and battle Masconomet Regional of Topsfield to a 9-9 tie.

Those results left coach Ryan Polley's crew at 7-5-2 overall, needing one more victory in the final four games to make the tourney.

"We're having a terrific season," said Polley. "We've played all but one of the established teams tight, staying close in every loss except one (13-4 to Marblehead).

"Three of our last four games are against tough opponents. But we're close to achieving our main objective of making the tourney."

Schedule

Andover hosts North Andover this afternoon at the Doherty Middle School Field (3:30 p.m.), and the fledgling varsity team wraps up regular season play next week with games against powerhouse opponents Marblehead (Tuesday, away) and Billerica (Thursday, home).

A scheduled game with Tyngsboro this past Tuesday was rained out, and at presstime no new date had been announced although it may have been played yesterday.
